

Germs Revisited.

12.30-2.30pm

Thursday 16 March 2017

St Luke's Chapel, Radcliffe

Humanities, University of

Oxford

Bad germs? Friendly bacteria? Do we need to rethink our relationships with the microscopic world? Join us for an interdisciplinary lunch time talk. All Welcome. Lunch Provided.

Using past and present ideas drawn from medicine, fiction, and art, Dr Emilie Taylor-Brown (English), Dr Jamie Lorimer (Geography) and Dr Nicola Fawcett (Medicine) come together to discuss new ways of thinking about human-microbe relationships in dialogue with developing trends in microbiome studies.
